

Karen Stephens BCyber’s Co-Founder & CEO has been named as a finalist in the Australian Cyber Security Awards for Female Cyber Leader of the Year 2023.

The inaugural Australian Cyber Security Awards is the premier event to honour outstanding individuals and businesses making significant contributions to the cyber security industry.

These esteemed awards are distinguished for recognising individuals and businesses, rather than products and platforms, enabling the acknowledgement of all cyber stakeholders in the industry. From defence, insurance and cloud service technology through to STEM, consultancy and ransomware protection.

The finalist list, which was announced on Friday, 14 April 2023, features over 125 high-achieving professionals across 22 submission-based categories.

Cyber Security Connect’s editor, Liam Garman said:

“All Australian businesses face mounting cyber security challenges. The annual Australian Cyber Security Awards is our chance to recognise the best and brightest in the industry, and applaud their tireless efforts in keeping us safe,” he said.

“From those who work in financial services, through to our vital logistics infrastructure, I wish all of our finalists good luck – and I look forward to meeting you all in person for the inaugural Australian Cyber Security Awards in June!”

Karen Stephens, Co-Founder & CEO of BCyber, said that she was humbled to be recognised and proud to be named as a finalist in the Australian Cyber Security Awards 2023.

“BCyber’s recognition for our excellent contribution to the cyber security industry reinforces the strength of our service and dedication to connecting with the community and engaging with clients,” she added.